

PEACE ENVOY AGAIN FAILS IN MISSION

Though He Makes No Statement Of Attainments It Is Understood Hill Refused To Agree To Maytorena's Concession

Plans For War Continue To Develop—Yaqui Reinforcements Due This Morning—Large Supply Of Ammunition In Camps

Indications that the efforts of Peace Commissioner General Ramon Sosa, sent to Naco by the Aguas Calientes convention, have failed of their purpose, were yesterday numerous, and from the conclusions drawn by almost all in Naco who are conversant on facts at issue are that there will be war between the factions of Hill and Maytorena until one or the other conquers. Sosa, when seen last evening by a Review representative refused to talk, and made an engagement for a statement later. At the time he was supposed to make his statement of the day's proceedings, he evaded the representative completely.

He spent a part of the day in the camps of each of the battling generals, but nothing of the arrangements he made or failed of making was learned last evening. It is understood, however, that Hill refused to agree to Maytorena's concession and refrain from attacking the latter unless he removed to Nogales inside of five days after taking the agreed position seven kilometers outside Naco. In the meantime, regardless of the attitude of peace, and the apparent partial recognition of the armistice, plans for an attack on the city are under way by Maytorena and plans for further defense are being laid by Hill. The firing of the two sides also continues at intervals though it is fairly light.

Yesterday Maytorena received another shipment of ammunition, making in all better than 1,000,000 rounds in his camp. He has 650 Yaqui reinforcements enroute from Guzman, who left Nogales yesterday and are due in Naco this morning. His sharpshooters are doing good work, getting four Hill men yesterday who were sent to the hospital at Douglas, and two others last night. It is said the man who is responsible for the most of the Hill casualties is located almost two miles from the city, and nearly always hits his men if he has a fair chance for a shot.

Hill has plenty of ammunition. In addition he is due to receive 500,000 rounds this afternoon. He has had no reinforcements since his men from Agua Prieta arrived joined him, and there are no indications of new men in his camp at any early date.

The Red Cross nurses who have been attached to the Hill forces since the arrival of the campaign on the border yesterday returned from the hospital at Douglas. They rushed into Naco last evening on advice that the Yaquis were about to attack, and so that they may be on hand when the final struggle comes, or in case their attention is needed by any of the wounded soldiers. The attention of the Red Cross staff of the Hill army to their duties has been the source of many compliments from Americans and army officials on the American side.

NOW APPEARS CONVENTION FAILED

EL PASO, Oct. 22.—Advice from Mexico city tonight indicated that the Aguas Calientes convention has already resulted in a failure and will not be renewed. An official telegram from Guadalajara said military bulletins from the national capital reported Gen. Antonio Villareal and others of the Carranza delegates remained today in Mexico City.

The convention adjourned in order, it is said, to force Carranza representatives to invite their chief to attend the convention in person, and it was to have had renewed sessions today.

Carranza's refusal to go to Aguas Calientes is believed to have occasioned a hitch in proceedings. Carranza's agents intimated the presence of a strong force of Villa troops within

BANK ROBBERS RUN INTO TRAP WHICH POSSE DRAWS TIGHT

Immigration Inspectors Are Told Of Fleeing Robbers Presence In Neighborhood—Two Are Instantly Killed When Halted

BLAIN, Wash., Oct. 22.—The band of men that robbed the bank of Sedro-Wooley of $20,000 Saturday night, whose progress northward through sparsely settled parts of Skagit and Whatcom counties has been continuous since the robbery, fell into the posse's trap three miles north of the international line, and two of their number were killed and a third wounded. One member of the posse was also instantly slain.

The dead are: Clifford Adams, Canadian immigration inspector, shot through the brain and heart, and two robbers, both young, wearing belts heavy with gold coins. The wounded are: E. H. Keith, special detective of the Great Northern Railroad, and an unidentified robber.

The robbers, walking north of the Great Northern railroad tracks, were observed when they passed through Blaine and word was telephoned to the Canadian immigration inspector at Hazelton. B. C. Adams and Keith and A. E. Burke met the robbers on the track and Burke ordered them to halt. Instead, the foremost robber drew a pistol. Burke immediately shot the fellow dead. The firing then became general.

INDIAN FORCES WILL SOON TAKE PLACE ON BRITISH FIRING LINE

Address Just Released By Censor States They'll Be In Field Immediately—Will Teach Many Lessons To Enemy In War

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Indian forces will soon be taking their places on the firing lines besides their British comrades in an address delivered last Tuesday and just released by the censor.

"The enemy makes it a matter of reproach that we are using Asiatic troops in Europe. I reply in the words of the famous sentence over the gateway of the University of Aberdeen, 'They say—what they say. Let them say,' and I add this: 'It is not in our eyes a matter of reproach but a matter of pride that our Indian fellow subjects feel themselves identified with ourselves in the present quarrel, and I fully expect the enemy may, before the war ends, learn several unneeded lessons from Indian troops: lessons in chivalry, humanity, and respect for persons and homes of the poor and humble.'"

PROGRESSIVE OPEN MEETING "FADES AWAY"

Opens With Fair Audience But Too Much Cold And Optimism Combined To Drive Crowds To Haunts Where Opinions Differ

Young And Alexander Principal Speakers—Roast Old Parties And Make Several Startling Statements On Campaigns

Although it is generally known that Theodore Roosevelt and Prohibition are the two principal talking points of the Bull Mooseers, neither was scarcely mentioned at their meeting last night at Castello lot, and when they elicited about as much enthusiasm as the playing of "Die Watch am Rhein" at the convention of allies.

When the meeting started there was a bunch of Bull Moose chiefs on the platform, most of them primed to make a speech, but there was no time left for the others when the two who spoke got through. Neither was there any audience, so the meeting adjourned. When it started there were probably 300 persons present, but when it was over there were 30, by actual count, and they were all Bull Mooseers and so sold their horns knocked together like they had the Buck fever.

The two gentlemen who regaled the audience with the doctrines of their cult were George U. Young, candidate for governor, and Capt. J. L. B. Alexander, candidate for attorney general. They divided the time about equally, though Young made the first and by far the best speech. He held the crowd pretty well, but he had to make some rather startling statements to do it. One of them was that the Republicans could spend a million dollars and then not even start Cameron on his race for governor, much less elect him. This statement was made in the face of the general knowledge on the part of the public that the race is between Cameron and Hunt and that Young will pull up a poor third. Candidate Young also said he believed he was going to be elected, but his looks and tone belied his statement.

Early in his speech someone sent up a list of questions to Mr. Young to be answered. The first one was, "Have you any solution for the problem of the unemployed?" The speaker tried to answer the question by telling what he had endeavored to do for the unemployed as mayor of Phoenix and how it had failed because that state law will not permit a city to issue bonds over a certain percent of its valuation. He finally wound up by launching into a dissertation on the efficiency of personal courage in times of distress, that if a fellow has it in him and really wants to work he'll get by some way, etc.

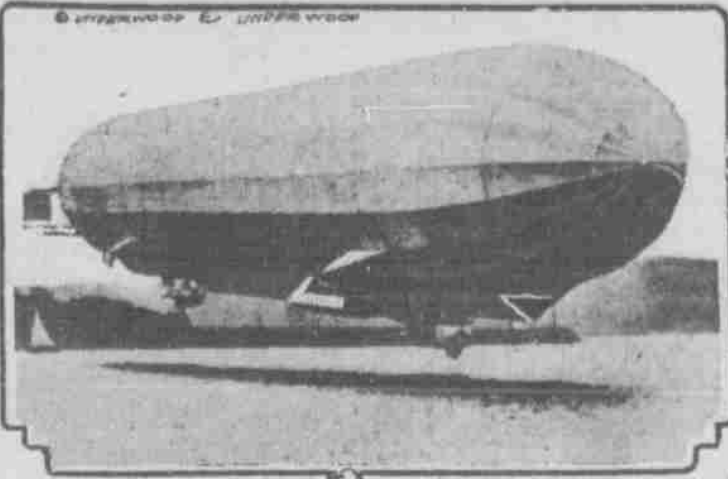

To the audience his explanation reminded one very much of the famous reply made by President Taft in a speech delivered during hard times when some one in the audience asked "What are the unemployed working-men going to do?" And the man whose chief record in history will be that he sat on the lid for four years replied, "God knows, I don't."

Mr. Young then quoted the well known remark of Bismarck to the effect that the state should furnish employment to men who really wanted work and couldn't get it. George U. Young then was his sentiments too, but a few minutes later when answering a question about the state furnishing work to the unemployed he said he believed in individualism as opposed to paternalism and that great projects conducted by the state nearly always cost twice as much as when operated by individuals. He said Roosevelt dam cost twice as much as it would have cost had it been built by private labor.

Candidate Y said there was no real difference today between the Republican and Democratic parties, that neither was true to the interests of the people, yet he exhorted all voters to come into the Bull Moose fold, saying they could be just as good Republicans or Democrats as they were in the old parties. Young said the new party had to draw its strength from the old parties, and for this reason he seemed to go very easy on the ordinary voter, though he went after the so-called bosses roughshod. He admitted he used to consort with the Republican party.

MRS. CARMAN TAKES WITNESS STAND IN HER OWN DEFENSE

Tells Straightforward Story In Opposition To Statements Made By Negress—Frankness Marked In Testimony To Jury

MINOLA, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman took the witness stand in her own defense in the supreme court late today to enter a sweeping denial to the charge that she murdered Mrs. Louise Bailey. Item by item she went over the story of Celia Coleman, a negress in her employ at the time of the tragedy in the Carman home at Freeport last June, and declared false every statement made against her by her former maid. She will be examined tomorrow.

Fabrication from beginning to end was, in essence, her characterization of the maid's narrative of the events of the night Mrs. Bailey was shot and killed in the office of Edwin Carman, husband of the defendant, and of subsequent happenings in the Carman home.

The story told by the girl was offered by the prosecution as tending directly to connect Mrs. Carman with the shooting, and the efforts of Mrs. Carman's counsel today in questioning her client were designed chiefly to discredit the servant's testimony. Mrs. Carman responded with alacrity and seemingly with entire frankness to the questions of her attorney, and her demeanor was that of a woman in complete command of herself. On one occasion she smiled. Again her face wore an expression of sadness, as when she mentioned her visit to the morgue to view the body of the woman the state claims she killed. She looked into the faces of the jurors with steady eyes when she desired to impress them with some particular point and she seemed resentful when certain points in the story of the negress were under discussion. Mrs. Carman was on the stand nearly an hour under direct examination.

Gallagher of the Lorimer and Gallagher Construction company are already under indictment in the United States courts charged with misapplication of funds in the LaSalle Street Bank while it was a National Bank prior to its incorporation as a state institution.

BRITISH PROTEST TO WORLD AGAINST MINES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—British Embassy published a communication from Great Britain to the allies and all neutral powers protesting against the Germans laying mines on the high seas and in trade routes and describing such action as "an illegitimate means of conducting warfare." The communication states mines were found fifty miles from the British coast, and that eight neutral and seven British merchant and fishing vessels have been destroyed by mines. The loss of sixty lives of neutrals and non-combatants has been caused.

ZEPPELIN READY TO RAID ENGLISH ISLE

GERMANS MEET WITH STRONG OPPOSITION ALONG WHOLE FRONT

Great Battle in Northern France And Along Flanders Territory Sees Terrific Slaughter As Men Are Hurled Against Men

PARIS, Oct. 22.—Continuing of the great battle between the sea and LaBasse in which the Belgians and the allies are holding their ground, was officially reported by the French war office tonight. Between Arras and Oise, Germans are declared to have met with strong opposition. The text of the report follows:

"The activity which the enemy displayed yesterday did not slacken today. Between the sea and LaBasse the battle continued with just as great violence without the Germans being able to force back the Belgian army or the French or British troops. Similarly between Arras and Oise, the enemy made determined efforts which at no point were crowned with success. In the Arras region we made progress between St. Hubert and Le Four de Paris. To the north of Verdun we gained ground at Haumont and Brabant on Meuse."

GERMAN REPORT GIVES LITTLE NEWS

BERLIN, via London, Oct. 22.—"On the Yser canal heavy fighting is still in progress," says a chief headquarters official announcement. "The enemy is reinforced by artillery fire from the sea at a point to the north-west of Nieuport, but in the engagement a British torpedo boat was put out of action by our artillery. Fighting continues west of Lille and here also our troops assume an offensive and repulsed the enemy at several points. The English lost several machine guns. No decision is yet reached in the eastern theatre of war."

ALLIES AIDED BY WARSHIPS STOP TUE TONS

Germans Make Violent Attempts To Advance Lines In North France And Flanders; German General Killed By Naval Gun

Report From Kaiser's Official News Sources Disseminates Little Advice Of Battle; Blames Fire From Ships For Halts

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Today the Germans made a violent attack on the environs of Ostend," says a Flushing Exchange Telegraph Dispatch, "which was repulsed by Belgian energy in a counterattack."

"Eleven British warships fired on the Germans again this morning. General Van Trip and his staff, who were together in Ixelles near Middelkerke, were killed by British naval guns."

"The contending armies seemingly are so nearly equal in strength that neither can force the other back or pierce the front or get around the wings." Shells of the allies are raining down upon the Germans at Ostend, the Telegraph's Antwerp correspondent reports.

"The battlefields are covered with bodies, the dispatch continues, 'but fresh German troops continue to arrive. Since morning the Germans have retreated slightly. A French squadron is supporting the English warships, which the German gunners have difficulty in reaching."

German cavalry is useless and men and horses alike are mowed down. The allies positions are strongly fortified by entrenchments and inundations of territory. The allies, in addition to Ostend and Nieuport, are also firing in the direction of Jabbeke, about seven miles north of Bruges, in order to destroy the railway line between Ostend and Bruges. All Ostend hotels are filled with wounded."

"In Poland the preliminary battle, at least, has moved a little more swiftly. Russians report they have been able to drive back the first German offensive move against Warsaw, the Polish capital, and the fortress of Iwanograd. All Russian accounts refer to this as a great victory. They declare that the Germans, besides losing many prisoners and guns, have left large quantities of ammunition and provisions in trenches they have prepared for defense."

Apparently there has been no more fighting on the East Prussian frontier where the situation has been quiet for some time, as German reports say, "Our troops are pursuing the retreating enemy in the direction of Osovetz."

had made no reference to this struggle, but today says, after several days battle: "No fighting was reported yesterday and no decisive result has been achieved."

LOST DUTCHMAN IS CLAIMED BY SCOTTY

MESA, Ariz., Oct. 22.—Arrivals from the Globe district bring word that Sylvester Portella, familiarly known as "Scotty," has found what he believes to be the Lost Dutchman mine. While out prospecting one of his burros strayed away and it was during the hunt for the animal that he came upon the old workings in an isolated place in the mountains. Crude mining implements, decayed by age, were in the tunnel, which was cut in solid formation. On the floor of the tunnel he found the bones of a human forearm but no other portion of the body from which it came. A small quantity of ore was picked up in a drift and taken to Globe for assay and the value was more than $100. The discovery lies east of Goldfield. The old Criswell ranch is situated directly east of the desired property.

"Scotty" left Globe Wednesday with a pack of five burros loaded with supplies and provisions and took a man with him. He has already taken steps to have the claim placed in his name and will at once cut a trail from the mine to the road.

The story of the Lost Dutchman mine is known to all prospectors of the southwest and is too long to be described here. A Dutchman from the desert in his dying moments bubbled of gold that he had found, but passed out before its location was definitely given. Since that time prospectors have hunted in California and Arizona for the fabulous wealth he told of and time and again the finding of it has been heralded, but developments have always proved the reports untrue.
